

6 Fitzroy Square, W1

This is a Georgian townhouse in one of London's most handsome garden squares. Two handsome iron lanterns set in the original front railings and a wide front door with an elegant fanlight mark the outside. The stone paved entrance hall and original stone staircase lead up to the two principal rooms on the first floor. These rooms have striking plaster cornices and marble fireplaces with polished floorboards.

The Adam Rooms, overlooking the square with its private garden, have featured in many film productions and are a truly perfect setting for sophisticated cocktails or dinner.

A combination of the Adam Rooms with the library can also be used - for example for a drinks reception followed by dinner, or a board meeting followed by an AGM.

Durbar Court, SW1

Durbar Court, at the heart of the India Office, is the masterpiece of Matthew Digby Wyatt. Originally open to the sky, the four sides of the court are surrounded by three storeys of columns and piers supporting arches. The ground floor Doric and first floor Ionic columns are of polished red Peterhead granite, while the top floor Corinthian columns are of grey Aberdeen granite. The pavement is of Greek, Sicilian and Belgian marble. The court was first used in 1867 for a reception for the Sultan of Turkey. The name 'Durbar Court' dates only from 1902 when some of the coronation celebrations of King Edward VII were held there.

The Old Courtroom Lecture Theatre, Brighton

The Old Courtroom was designed by Charles Sorby in 1868. It was opened as a Court House on 3rd July 1869, and remained as a County Court House until 1967 when East Sussex County Council Library Service took over the running of the building. In 1997 the ownership was transferred to Brighton & Hove Council and it was then used as a store room for Brighton Museum & Art Gallery. Following the Museum's refurbishment in 2002, the items in store were re-located and the work began on the restoration. The restoration of the building has involved extensive repairs to the stonework, the replacement of many broken leaded windows and the complete refurbishment of the interior space. It is now a wonderful space for lectures and small receptions.
